Recycling Committee 7/16

Recycling is contagious; You set the example, and others will follow

Money in our Pockets

Last month I was able to calculate the savings generated from our recycling efforts through the end of April 2016, which was "break even". This did not come as surprise, and were it not for Tony and the work he's done with the vendors and hauling providers, we would not have fared nearly as well. I'm pleased to tell you that in May we had a positive savings of $42, not a big number, but a positive one; and we are already up $133 for June scrap metal. Now that the summer months are here, we will start seeing the influx of seasonal resident's trash; and while we know that amounts will go up, unfortunately we don't have a handle on the impact for each individual category; our hope is that the increase in glass and aluminum will more than off-set the increase in plastic and paper. The savings generated by our recycling efforts result in a reduced hauling and processing fees because we are providing a significant amount of recyclable material and the quality of the materials is good and they can easily be sold by the vendor. Those savings are applied to the removal cost per ton expense for each classification of materials. We expect that we'll see some fluctuation from month to month depending on prices fetched for aluminum, copper, and scrap metal; however, we're not looking for any major changes before the end of the year. The recycling market will rebound, but until it does, we need to be mindful of the important role each of us plays in protecting our environment and preserving our precious non-renewable natural resources. We sincerely appreciate your patience as we work through this period, and your continued support of your recycling program – recycling does have a positive impact and benefits all of us.

Everyone Does Make a Difference

Here are some things that companies throughout the country are doing to recycle/reuse items that would otherwise occupy a landfill somewhere:

- Hipcycle has worked with a product partner to produce a number of uniquely designed bags and a barbecue apron from decommissioned Delta airline life vests. The bright yellow bags come in yoga, tote, pouch and messenger designs.
- Nike pledged to stop buying carbon offsets in 2010 and has since been working toward reducing its own emissions to eventually eliminate all waste products from its manufacturing process. Nike is kicking up its sustainability efforts by creating more shoes from manufacturing waste. According to the company's recent sustainability report, 70 percent of the company's footwear contains materials made from ground-up shoes and scraps. The company is also selling its used materials to outside buyers for running tracks, playgrounds, gym floors and carpet underlay.
- Seattle-based textile technology startup Evrru has partnered with Levi Strauss & Co. to create Levi's 511 jeans, a pilot pair of jeans made entirely of post-consumer cotton waste, which helps reduce both waste and water consumption. A pair of jeans can be created from approximately five old cotton T-shirts, which were recycled, purified, broken down into a pulp and created into a new fiber that is finer than silk and stronger than cotton.
- Casella Organics has teamed up with a number of Portland communities to recycle biosolids for compost. At Casella's Hawk Ridge Compost Facility, the recycled biosolids are mixed with a carbon source like wood chips, oxygen and water to create rich compost that can be used as a soil amendment or a direct medium for plant growth. Annually, Casella produces approximately 800,000 wheel barrows of organic compost, roughly 5 percent of which contains biosolids.
- In an effort to reduce food waste, NY - based condiment company Sir Kensington's has introduced a new vegan mayonnaise, Fabanaise, made with aquafaba, which is the liquid left behind from chickpea cans or cooking with legume. Fabanaise utilizes aquafaba as a natural egg substitute and comes in two flavors: classic and chipotle. To make this product, Sir Kensington's has established a long-term partnership with Ithaca Hummus to ensure an ample supply of aquafaba.
- Dearborn, MI - based automaker Ford Motor Co. is working with NY - based sustainable chemistry company Novomer to produce CO2-based foam and plastic required for its vehicles. Converge, the branded CO2-based polyols, could be featured in Ford's vehicles within the next five years. According to Ford, these polyols could help reduce its annual petroleum consumption by 2 million barrels. This new development goes hand-in-hand with Ford's other sustainability efforts, which include using upholstered fabric made of recycled plastic bottles for the seats in one of its pickup trucks and testing other upcycled and plant-based materials for window trim and other interiors.
